2024 Regulatory Achievement Award. The British Columbia College of Nurses and Midwives has a long record of applying regulatory tools to protect the public and strengthen the Canadian healthcare system. Known as an active collaborator, our awardee has always sought to work with a wide range of partners in the interest of advancing public protection.

An active and involved member of NCSBN since 2008, the College has supported NCSBN through attendance and participation at NCSBN meetings and events. The College has the distinction of being NCSBN's first associate member and one of the first exam user members.

The College also championed adopting the NCLEX-RN as Canada's entry-to-practice exam. Open to change and improvement, the College consistently adopts new approaches, tools and systems reflecting best practices in regulation. For making significant and lasting contributions to nursing regulation and advancing NCSBN's mission, the British Columbia College of Nurses and Midwives is honored with the Regulatory Achievement Award in 2024.
